

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

A developing depression tracking across Scotland is bringing another spell of very wet weather, lasting much of today across the southern and central areas of Scotland.

Expect a further 10-20 mm quite widely during today through the warning area, perhaps with as much as 40 mm very locally.

The Met Office have issued an Amber Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:30 on Wed, 18th Jul 2012 until 18:00 on Wed, 18th Jul 2012

Further persistent, sometimes heavy, rain is expected to affect central Scotland for much of today, moving southwards into southern Scotland this afternoon. Localised flooding could occur, especially within the Amber area.

The public should be prepared for possible disruption, and particularly poor driving conditions at times. Conditions are expected to ease later today.

This warning has been updated to remove Northern Ireland, Wales and northern England from the Yellow warning, whilst the Amber region remains unchanged.
